

CARBON FOOLS DAY

28th October 2008 will go down in history as 'carbon fools day,' a sad day for democracy and science, a day when opposition parties failed to challenge a dangerously unsound policy, devoid of any real scientific basis, without any hope of influencing climate change. Ironically, it was also a day when London saw the first October snow since 1934.

These 'carbon fools,' who are allowing the unjustified demonization of CO2 to be used as a weapon against prosperity, energy security and mobility, have committed the UK to an 80% reduction in CO2 emissions by 2050, without any mapped out strategy of how it will be achieved. Advice on that task falls to yet another expensive QUANGO, loaded with 'Green Alliance' members, namely the 'Committee on Climate Change.'

By coincidence, 28th October 1971 was the day that MPs voted for us to join that other expensive, bureaucratic nightmare - the EEC, now the EU.

Paul Biggs

p.m.biggs@bham.ac.uk