

“We must not lose sight of the essential condition that this is to be a federation of states and not a single government of Australia. The separate states are to continue as autonomous bodies, surrendering only so much of their power as is necessary for the establishment of general government to do for them collectively what they cannot do individually for themselves.”

- Sir Samuel Griffith, 1891