

All about Illegal Taxation

The Letters Editor,

The media has in general been enthusiastically assuming that the implementation of the Resource Rent Tax is a legitimate act.

The entire proposal is an illegitimate and discriminatory grab for shareholders funds to fill Labor's unnecessary spendathon hole.

What the mining companies should do is take the entire case to the High Court. There are witnesses available with the knowledge to show that the proposed tax is illegitimate. It is an arbitrary shakedown of those who have the cash. It is reminiscent of an old fashioned highway robbery.

A shameful highway robbery done under the auspices of the Canberra Kremlin, engineered by the bureaucratic apparachiks running the Treasury; and approved of by the elected government which is supposed to protect citizens from internal and external thugs.

Their actions are reminiscent of those of a Mafia.

If the miners learn how to defend themselves and if the Liberal Party discovers how to run an election, the Labor Party will be shamed out of office.

It is illegal for the Government of Australia to pass legislation that penalises one section of the community for the benefit of another. (See The Constitution Part V. Powers of the Parliament 51 (ii.) Taxation; but so as not to discriminate between States or parts of States; And: 51 (iii.) And 53: See: <http://alldownunder.com/oz-k/government/australian-constitution/constitution-2.htm>).

Ronald Kitching

North Rockhampton, QLD, Australia.

6 July 2010