

Ben Bernanke Gets His Comeuppance: The Every Breath You Take Music Video

Gary North
April 26, 2006

The Federal Reserve System, a private corporation with a President-appointed Board of Governors, is the classic monopoly in action: "for the good of the people," of course. It controls the money supply, which in turn influences everything else in the economy.

This makes Professor Ben Bernanke of Princeton America's monopolist numero-uno.

The video keeps repeating this line: "I'll be watching you." That is very good advice. If you value your net worth, you will keep watching Bernanke and his colleagues. That's why I have created these FED-monitoring departments.

Federal Reserve Charts:

<http://www.garynorth.com/public/department29.cfm>

Federal Reserve Policy:

<http://www.garynorth.com/public/department44.cfm>

But watching is not enough. We need a little satire to get the message across to others, who know nothing of how the FED works. Some grad students at Columbia University's business school have provided a gem. This video does a great job. It takes the Police's "Every Breath You Take," and re-works it. It's better than the original.

Now, crank up those desktop speakers. It's video time!

<http://www.garynorth.com/public/1216.cfm>